Reformation in Scotland The Start of the Reformation. Throughout the Middle Ages, Scotland had always been run by not one, but two rulers - the reigning monarch and the church. It was the King who collected the taxes, called men to battle and laid down the law. But most ordinary people owed their true allegiance not to him, but to the Catholic faith.

The Reformation movement within Germany diversified almost immediately, and other reform impulses arose independently of Luther. Huldrych Zwingli built a Christian theocracy in Zürich in which church and state joined for the service of God. Zwingli agreed with Luther in the centrality of the doctrine of justification by faith, but he espoused a different understanding of the Holy Communion.

Scottish Reformation Tours took me on a full day tour of Covenanter sites in Lanarkshire and Ayrshire, places I would never have found on my own or left to public transportation alone. Also, the Fishers are very knowledgeable about not only the places themselves, but the larger history of the Covenanters and the Reformation in general.
